Welcome letter

Dear Colleagues,

We are thrilled to invite you to join us online for the XIII International Conference on Immunonutrition from October 28-31, 2024.

The intended audience for this conference organized by the International Society for Immunonutrition (ISIN) includes students, researchers and industry or clinical professionals in the interdisciplinary field of nutritional and immunological health. Conference sessions will examine the many interactions between nutrition, lifestyle and immunity and their effect on health and disease. Furthermore, the symposium's program will allow scientific discussion with speakers from across the world and many opportunities for presenting oral communications and posters from selected abstracts.

Your involvement is crucial to addressing issues that the ISIN is dedicated. By actively participating, you contribute to the development of a program that aligns with the expectations of those who are engaged in the interdisciplinary science of immunonutrition.

Given current worldwide economic conditions, we will conduct the conference online to enhance inclusion of a diverse international audience. This format will provide opportunities for participation from anywhere, offering recorded lectures and direct discussions with prominent researchers in the field of immunonutrition. We have structured the program to accommodate a global audience, with sessions scheduled in a way that is accessible to as many participants from around the world as possible.

We strongly encourage you to participate in this conference and all its activities, contributing your experience and expertise to make this event truly unforgettable.

We look forward to meeting you all online in October 2024.

Welcome!
